

21. The Reserve Bank of Australia would most likely implement contractionary monetary policy if
- (a) potential GDP was above actual GDP.
  - (b) unemployment was below the natural rate of unemployment.
  - (c) the economy was affected by a negative aggregate demand shock.
  - (d) inflation crept above 2%.